Lisa Eppley-Pelusi is passionate about supporting and advocating for designers, users, artists, and manufacturers who create beautiful spaces and the thoughtfully curated objects that complete them. A graduate of Penn State's Landscape Architecture program, Lisa spent over a decade honing her skills in landscape architecture and urban planning with renowned global firms such as EDAW and AECOM.

Her creative and technical expertise eventually led her to explore small business photography and wall gallery design. Through her venture, Mud Stew Photography and Design, she artfully blended personal connections to outdoor spaces with curated home displays, incorporating professional photography, children's artwork, and vintage family photos. Her belief that outdoor living is where people thrive, adapt, and find celebration in change, eventually shifted her to a contractor role as a furniture procurement specialist and exterior designer for landscape architects. These combined endeavors evolved into Mud Stew Modern, reflecting a broader vision, while honoring its origins.

Throughout her career, Lisa has collaborated with vendors and award-winning design firms across the Baltimore, Annapolis, and DC areas, contributing her expertise to marketing materials, design, procurement, and outdoor furnishings. For Lisa, the most fulfilling aspect of her work is partnering with creative minds to perfect the final placement of objects in exquisitely designed spaces.
